Remember Dan

What's in a name?
Dan Sweeney made the ultimate sacrifice. And it shouldn't be forgotten, many are saying.

Fox Chase may find space on the neighborhood playground for both of its departed sons' names.

One of the five diamonds at the lower fields of Fox Chase Playground in the Northeast Philly neighborhood will be dedicated to Dan Sweeney on June 23.

April 9 will be one year since Sweeney's death. He and Lt. Robert Neary, both part of Ladder 10, were killed after a wall collapsed at a Kensington fire last year.

Fox Chase residents knew there was a precedent of naming city recreation centers after officers and firefighters killed in the line of duty.

"And we just thought it would be a way to honor our neighborhood hero," said Bob McHugh, who lobbied for the renaming. "That was our goal: to keep his name alive in the neighborhood. And honor him for his sacrifice."

Unfortunately, not everyone was on board.

The original plan was to rename the entire lower-field complex – five fields – in Danny's name.

Opposition grew. Some claimed the memorial would dilute the Eddie Polec memorial.

Polec was murdered on the steps of St. Cecilia's Church in 1993. The bruise-colored rec center was named in his honor in 1995.

Some residents cried, "What next?"

Change the name of the library? The school? The neighborhood?

People tore Sweeney Field fliers. They stole signed petitions.

"They used Eddie Polec as an excuse," McHugh said. "And used other people that have died as an excuse. ... They didn't necessarily want it named for anybody else, but they didn't want it changed."

McHugh said a longtime rec employee was asked to help. McHugh was told, "Hey, if you're getting fields named, how about getting Field 1 named for me. I raked and worked on that field for years and if it should be named for anybody, it should be named for me."

Another person said: "Do you know how many years I sold hot dogs in the snack stand? Why don't they name a field for me?"

Mrs. Sweeney sold hot dogs. Mr. Sweeney coached. Danny played.

"This is a slap in the face," McHugh said.

An online petition at Change.org against Sweeney Field has about 150 signatures.

A petition in favor of the honor garnered the maximum of 2,500.

Bill Gault, president of Fire Fighters Local 22, said any honor to Sweeney has the union's full support.

"We do not wish to engage in any neighborhood debates about the best location for a memorial," he said in an email. "We wish only to see that it happens so that Daniel and his family are appropriately honored."

It's simple: a scoreboard or a plaque featuring Danny's name.

"How tough would that be?" McHugh said.

Quoted

Fire Commissioner Lloyd Ayers: Let community decide

"We have a lot of people in the community that was for renaming the field. And as I understand it, I heard there was some folks that really didn't want to rename it. It's really got to be up to the community. I believe that the community has the right to make the decisions and if we stop and look at the community, and look at the involvement, I think then the democratic process has to prevail."

Man arrested for alleged mailbox rampage night

Joyride. Police said a Delaware man rammed 15 mailboxes, then posted about his alleged caper on Facebook.

Billy Moffett/ FACEBOOK

A Townsend, Del., man was arrested Monday for allegedly ramming 15 mailboxes with his pickup truck in the early morning of March 24, according to state police.

State troopers identified the vehicle used as a Ford pickup and located a truck fitting its description owned by Billy Moffett.

Moffett, 20, faces 15 counts of criminal mischief and was released on $1,500 bail.

According to Moffett's Facebook page, he works in maintenance at a Camden, Del., Wal-Mart. His interests include Remington shotguns, "hot boating chicks" and mud bogging. Moffett mentions his love for "running his truck" and riding dirt bikes several times.

Moffett wrote five days after the alleged crime that he needed to sell his Ford, saying, "Gotta get rid of it ASAP" and "I got in trouble with it. And I'm tryna put a down payment on a street bike." In a post Monday, the same day Moffett was arrested, he wrote that he had bought another truck — what he called a "heavy Chevy."

Shakeup. City chooses first collections chief

Mayor Michael Nutter yesterday appointed the city's first chief revenue collections officer. Thomas Knudsen is charged with improving revenue collection rates — part of an ongoing push by the administration to ferret out stashes of unclaimed cash in the face of budgetary challenges.

Knudsen oversaw a turnaround of the once troubled Philadelphia Gas Works while serving for 11 years as its CEO. He most recently worked a six-month stint as chief financial recovery officer for the School District of Philadelphia, where he helped introduce an austere cost-cutting plan that stirred controversy.

That budget struggle is still being debated by the City Council, where Councilman Mark Squilla yesterday called the collections effort "lip service" because the five-year plan doesn't anticipate any increased revenue from the proposed reforms. "I just don't see the commitment to having any accountability on collections. To me, if you have a goal, there's more of an incentive for the department to go out and get that money."

Rutgers hoops coach fired after abuse video

Basketball. N.J. Gov. Christie also chimed in, calling the move "the right and necessary action to take in light of the conduct displayed."

Rutgers University men's basketball coach Mike Rice was fired yesterday after coming under scrutiny for a video that went viral a day earlier in which he was seen abusing his players.

The ESPN sports network released a video Tuesday showing Rice — who was briefly suspended for his behavior last year — shoving players, hurling balls at their heads, and berating them with homophobic slurs and profanity during practices.

Rutgers University President Robert Barchi said the video showed "a chronic and pervasive pattern of disturbing behavior."

"Coach Rice cannot continue to serve effectively in a position that demands the highest levels of leadership, responsibility and public accountability," Barchi said.

The New Brunswick, N.J.,-based public university is home to about 58,000 students.

Back in December, Rutgers Athletic Director Tim Pernetti had suspended Rice and slapped him with $75,000 in fines and lost salary after seeing the video.

In a statement yesterday, he acknowledged that he should have gone further.

N. Korea halts South entry to industrial zone

Standoff. Some South Korean experts said the North's move might be temporary given the park is a financial lifeline to Pyongyang.

North Korea closed access to a joint factory zone with South Korea yesterday, officials said, putting at risk $2 billion a year in trade that is vital for an impoverished state with a huge army, nuclear ambitions and a hungry population.

The move marked an escalation in North Korea's months-long standoff with South Korea and its ally Washington. On Tuesday, Pyongyang said it would restart a mothballed nuclear reactor, drawing criticism from the international community, including China, its major benefactor and diplomatic friend.

In Beijing, China's deputy foreign minister met with ambassadors from the U.S. and both Koreas to express "serious concern" about the Korean peninsula, China's Foreign Ministry said, in a sign China is increasingly worried about events on the Korean peninsula spinning out of control. The ministry said the meetings with Deputy Foreign Minister Zhang Yesui took place Tuesday.

Checking in with some of Hollywood's biggest names to see what they've been up to — in their own words, in 140 characters or fewer.

Today, Alec Baldwin can't believe it's his birthday, Niall Horan can't believe he's finally getting his braces off, Daniel Tosh is confused about food and Seth Rogen doesn't watch a lot of Jeremy Irons' television work.

@ABFalecbaldwin: Am I really 55? Wow. Like.....wow. Doesn't seem real.

@NiallOfficial: Morning! This is it! I'm going to the dentist! I think this is my last hour with braces! Oh how I'm gonna miss them! Naaaaaaat!

@danieltosh: why does every fish taco have to have two corn tortillas? let's chat!

@SethRogen: Of all the TV shows I've never seen, I've never seen "The Borgias" the most.

My big head

So, everyone hates my giant head and new photo (in my defense, I have a 10-month-old, which doesn't leave much time to get a Glamour Shot or wear contacts). Some of my favorite notes: "Poor you." "Why in the world would you put her head so big?" "That's the worst photo of you I've ever seen," and "You look terrible and old" (the last two were from my 77-year-old father and nanny, respectively.) All good points! I promise it's being resolved. In the meantime, Joseph Sanchez (@JJS_III), a reader in Beverly, Mass., gave me a terrific idea via this doodle and tweet: "This is a picture of you with minimalist, one-eyed Ninja Turtles for eyeballs." Rad. So here's the plan: Whoever can deface my face the best before I get a new headshot wins a prize. I'll be running the top submissions here in The Word, so tweet them to @dorothyatmetro.

Heather Morris: Expecting a tiny dancer

It's been a week of shake-ups for the cast of "Glee." First, it was announced that main cast member Cory Monteith was admitted to rehab Monday morning for a substance abuse problem, and now it looks like Heather Morris is pregnant. Us Weekly broke the news that the 26-year-old is expecting a baby with her longtime boyfriend, Taylor Hubbell. "She's a little more than three months along and starting to show," the source tells Us Weekly. "It was totally unexpected."

LaBeouf: 'I'm not an angry elf'

In an interview with MTV for his new film "The Company You Keep," Shia LaBeouf says the public has the wrong perception about him. "I feel like there's a misconception of me being this angry little elf. I'm not. I'm really not," he tells the site. I used to think Wallace Shawn (above) was Hollywood's "angry little elf," but now that LaBeouf brings it to my attention...

Mrs. Carter: 'I'm just a woman'

Beyonce knows what her critics say about the decision to name her new tour "The Mrs. Carter Show," and she's just going to ignore them. "I guess I am a modern-day feminist," she muses to British Vogue. "Why do you have to label yourself anything? I'm just a woman, and I love being a woman." Do people write to her about the size of her head? I'm asking for a friend.

"Eva" centers around the life of singer Eva Cassidy. / CHERYL MANN

Like many listeners, Frank Chaves didn't discover the music of Eva Cassidy until after her death in 1996. The singer, whose repertoire ranged from jazz standards to blues, pop, folk and country tunes, passed away at the age of 33 from melanoma. Since her untimely death, her stunning voice and tragic story have led to much wider recognition.

Tonight at the Annenberg Center, River North Dance Chicago will premiere Chaves' new piece, "Eva," which was commissioned by Dance Celebration for its 30th anniversary season. Chaves, River North's artistic director, was first exposed to Cassidy's music by Randy Swartz, artistic director of Dance Celebration.

"I fell in love with her voice," Chaves says. "She has the voice of an angel and a gift for making you really hear and understand lyrics in a new way, a very clear and intense way."

"Eva" features four of Cassidy's covers: Sting's "Fields of Gold," the blues classic "Stormy Monday," the jazz standard "Autumn Leaves" and the gospel favorite "Wade in the Water," with snippets of Cassidy speaking between the songs. "It was challenging because Eva wasn't known for talking," Chaves says, "but I wanted to create the sense that you were attending a live concert. It's a little haunting, but I think it's also tender and warming to the soul to hear her voice as if she were there."

The remainder of the program comprises three Philadelphia premieres and a pair of return performances. "The Good Goodbyes," set to an original solo piano suite by Chicago Children's Choir director Josephine Lee, is about relationships within the dance community, while "Renatus" is a striking solo for a female dancer wearing a scarlet evening gown with a 30-foot train. "Three" is a male trio dance with an Asian-inflected score, created by Robert Battle shortly before he was named artistic director of the renowned Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater. Finally, Chaves' "Forbidden Boundaries" features the entire company playing tug-of-war with a stretchy, ripped shirt.

The River North troupe plays tug-of-war in "Forbidden Boundaries." ERIKA DUFOUR

The full program, Chaves says, represents the diversity of River North Dance Chicago.

"I don't want people to just come see River North, I want people to feel River North," he says. "Our mission is to create and present a highly artistic program that is also accessible and entertaining, even for an audience who might be afraid of dance."

Diversity and weird

Video. Local film blog Cinedelphia launches a monthlong festival devoted to the city.

Typically, when a film festival includes a city in its name, it simply denotes the location. For the Cinedelphia Film Festival, however, the "delphia" half is as important to its mission as the "cine." The festival — the brainchild of local film advocate Eric Bresler, founder of Cinedelphia.com — will feature 40 programs and nearly 100 screenings throughout April, all shining a light on the city's multifaceted film community.

"I've been involved in the Philly film community for 15 years now," says Bresler, who is also director of programming at PhilaMOCA.

"It's a small community, kind of like Philly is a small city, so I wanted to bring together all of Philly's film-related organizations and showcase them under one banner."

It all kicks off tonight with a look back at the history of film programming at International House, featuring a selection of short films originally screened there in 1979. A later program includes a retrospective of the Philadelphia Film Festival's Danger After Dark series.

The line-up throughout the month is "as diverse as can be, like the community itself," Bresler says, thought he does admit to "a concentration on the weird." That includes his own offbeat VHS collage project Video Pirates; an evening of Wes Anderson-themed burlesque; and a double feature of locally shot 1980s horror movies.

But the festivals also celebrates the rich history of local film, with a birthday celebration for silent film pioneer Sigmund Lubin and a talk by TLA Entertainment founder Ray Murray about the company's history.

"I think there's a good overview of Philly film over the past hundred years," Bresler says, "with a big concentration on celebrating the now."

10 Films to see this week

1 'Evil Dead' Sam Raimi's name is attached to two current pictures: one a nice prequel to "The Wizard of Oz," the other a semi-remake of his 1981 debut with a high quotient of self-amputations.

2 'Jurassic Park 3-D' "Jurassic Park" is 20 years old. You're old. Sorry.

3 'Gimme the Loot' Already heralded as another "Raising Victor Vargas," Adam Leon's low-budget comedy tells of teenaged Bronx graffiti artists who hatch an elaborate scheme to tag the Mets' home run apple.

4 'Reality' Matteo Garrone surprised not a few people when his follow-up to the crime saga "Gommorah" turned out to be this satire about a fishmonger who winds up on the Italian version of "Big Brother."

5 'Starbuck' This Canadian comedy, about a serial sperm donor who has fathered 533 children, was such a hit in its native land that an American remake, with Vince Vaughn and Chris Pratt, is already due out later this year. See it in French first!

Jane Levy in one of the many pleasant and upbeat scenes in the "Evil Dead" remake. / TRISTAR PICTURES

6 'Ginger & Rosa' Filmmaker Sally Potter ("Yes," Orlando") returns with this somewhat calmed-down tale of adolescent female friendship, starring Elle Fanning.

7 'The Silence' "Cold Case" mixes with a dour "Twin Peaks" for this German drama, in which a town shocked by the unsolved disappearance of a girl is traumatized once again when an apparent copycat crime occurs.

8 'G.I. Joe: Retaliation' No one much liked the first "G.I. Joe" movie, but it made a lot of money, so Hollywood made another one. And now it looks like the same thing is happening again, only without Channing Tatum. Good job, America: This is why we can't have nice things.

9 'The Host' There are no more "Twilight"s to film, but there is another Stephenie Meyer novel about emo aliens.

10 'Temptation: Confessions of a Marriage Counselor' Another season, another Tyler Perry movie. There's no Madea in this affair drama, but there is Kim Kardashian because [insert joke here].

Horoscope

♈ Aries | March 21 - April 20. Offering unsolicited advice is risky at best, so if you do so anyway, make sure the recipient knows that it's just a suggestion.

♉ Taurus | April 21 - May 21. You're likely to have rigid ideas about how things should be done, so any input from a friend could be disruptive.

♊ Gemini | May 22 - June 20. It isn't always smart to try to do something the way another does, even if that person's work is excellent.

♋ Cancer | June 21 - July 22. Try to avoid a risky financial arrangement that you know little about and have little control over.

♌ Leo | July 23 - Aug. 22. An old, unresolved disagreement between you and your special someone could rear its ugly head if you allow it.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23 - Oct. 22. Even though your earning potential is excellent, the way you manage your affairs may not be up to snuff.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23 - Nov. 21. In order to complete what you start, you need to put limitations on how much you attempt to do.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22 - Dec. 21. Instead of trying to rectify another's erroneous perception of you, you're likely to let it go unchallenged and brood about the injustice.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22 - Jan 20. Be on guard, because there is reason to believe that you could be the target of an expert manipulator. Speak up.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21 - Feb 18. Be careful not to do anything that could offend someone important to you.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19 - March 20. As always, you will have a choice of how you view developments: positively or negatively. Don't envision failure when it's just as easy to see success.

The cold facts on an urban menace

I am suffering from constant noise from rogue ice cream trucks that don't heed the law and think they can blast their jingle tunes while parked and during all hours of the day and night. They've started already before the first day of spring and it is a perpetual annoyance! Police will not come. I've taken photos of the trucks, their license plates and, when posted, their mobile vendor license, but the city still does nothing.

I can't open my apartment windows and enjoy the weather without their noise intrusion. We don't need the ceaseless noise, we don't need the calories, we don't need the negative quality of life, but the city could use the fines that should be imposed on these outlaws.

Insurance fine a burden

Re: "Take care of yourself or the feds will do it for you" (Metro, April 3) The fact that someone does not have health insurance does not automatically mean they are irresponsible and want to shift the cost onto their fellow citizens. Many people simply cannot afford it. I know from personal experience when, after having knee replacement surgery, my insurance jumped from $100 per month to $700 per month, which I could not afford and had to give up my self-employment status and get a job which provided benefits.

The rationale to punish someone by a fine for not having insurance is the wrong approach.

NEEDS NOT BEING MET? STOP HAVING 'RELATIONSHIP SEX' AND GET REAL

Dating. Revealing what you want in bed will make your relationship stronger, even if it can be difficult to talk about.

Being honest about your sexual needs is mandatory.
GETTY IMAGES, DESIGN PICS RF

Someone said to me recently that from a physical standpoint, she enjoys casual sex more than sex in a relationship, because with a casual partner she feels more comfortable talking about her fantasies and focusing on her sexual pleasure. "In a relationship," she said, "you're invested in making the other person feel good — both physically and emotionally. Revealing what you want puts much more on the line."

She brings up a good point: When we're in relationships, is too much of our sex life focused on the other person? Are we so concerned with stroking our partners' egos that we care more about looking like we're enjoying sex rather than actually enjoying it? Maybe we fear that telling our partner what to do better might make them feel inadequate, or like we've never truly enjoyed the past sex we've had with them. So, in our minds, we sacrifice our fulfillment so that our loved one can feel like a sexual rock star.

The problem is, this type of "relationship sex" isn't actually good for a relationship. Yes, you should care about pleasing the other person physically and making sure they're comfortable — but that needs to be balanced with what you want, too. This means you have to bite the bullet, give your partner some direction, and tell them your fantasies —they're nothing to be ashamed of. Having exciting sex doesn't have to (and shouldn't) be something that's relegated to partners we don't care about.

We should be having our best sex within relationships because our partners know us. We shouldn't be shielding them from what we like because we're embarrassed, or worse, because we want to stroke their egos. You're not helping your relationship by doing this. The only way to have a good relationship is to stand up for the things you need. That's just as true in the bedroom as it is everywhere else.

Ware going to Atlanta

Kevin Ware, who suffered a gruesome injury in last Sunday's Elite 8 matchup against Duke, will be with his Louisville teammates at this weekend's Final Four in Atlanta and will likely watch from the sidelines.

Wonder Dog still in love with Philly

MLB. The former Philly will be in town this weekend doing TV broadcasting for the Royals.

Rex Hudler does TV broadcasts for the Kansas City Royals. / GETTY IMAGES

It's a sort of homecoming for one member of the Royals' organization. TV analyst Rex Hudler is stoked about returning to town this weekend when the Phils face the Royals.

"I'm all about the Fightin' Phils and my experience with them," Hudler told Metro. "I love the organization and the city."

After having the finest year of his 13-year MLB career in 1996, Hudler signed with the Phillies.

"The Phillies bought high," Hudler said. "I had a nice offer from the Dodgers and I didn't want to finish my career with a losing team, but the Phillies made me an offer I couldn't refuse [by doubling the Dodgers' $800,000]."

Unlike a number of players, Hudler calls his two years in Philadelphia the highlight of his career. Hudler, aka the Wonder Dog, was embraced by the fans for his hard-nose style.

"My wife and I had our first child that November [in 1997] and he has Down syndrome," Hudler said. "I couldn't believe the support I got from Philly. I remember when we left Orange County we were told that we were going to get chewed up and spit out by Phillies fans, and they were the greatest."

Hudler, who lived in Newtown Square, played two seasons here before jumping to broadcasting.

"While I was with the Phillies, I was asked to go on 'Good Morning America' and they asked what motivated a player when his team is 35 games out of first place," Hudler said. "One thing led to another, and that led to broadcasting as a career."

Hudler, who is known for uttering such quirky lines as "pilot to bombardier" and "get yourself a piece of cheese," is one of the most colorful broadcasters in the game.

97 problems

The 1997 Phillies started the season 30-70 and were 4-22 in June.

- "I didn't want my career to end that way, but that's the way it went," Hudler said. "We were a really bad team, but we had some talent — Curt Schilling, Mike Lieberthal, Scott Rolen, Ricky Bottalico and some guy named Ruben Amaro Jr."

"That's what it's about," Hudler said. "But this year, we have a lot of good young talent. It's going to be a good year for Kansas City."

Hudler has high hopes for the Phillies, too.

"When you have Ryan Howard, Chase Utley, Cole Hamels, Jimmy Rollins, Cliff Lee and Roy Halladay, you're going to be tough to beat. I can see the Phillies going to the playoffs, but they're going to have to beat 'Big Game' James Shields when we come in."

Don't count Foles out of Eagles' QB competition yet

NFL. The second-year quarterback might not be mobile, but he believes he can run the offense.

When pressed about it, Chip Kelly is quick to defend Nick Foles.

The second-year quarterback isn't mobile. On paper, he is the opposite of everything Kelly's fast-paced system preaches. Even with more athletic options, like Mike Vick and Dennis Dixon, gunning for the top spot, Foles believes he is in the mix to be the starter.

Start me up

It's too early to tell who will start when the Eagles open. Spring minicamps haven't even started. Still, Foles believes in himself.

- "Every single quarterback on this team believes he can be the starting quarterback," Foles said.

"I ran a high-tempo offense in college," Foles said. "I wouldn't be here right now if I didn't [fit]."

Foles put up some gaudy passing numbers in 2012, but also sported a 1-5 record. METRO
